CORTE MADERA CENTENNIAL - 2016

A CENTENNIAL GLIMPSE OF LOCAL HISTORY

Corte Madera: Celebrating a small Marin community with a rich and fascinating history

Thousands of people travel through Corte Madera on Highway 101 every day, but all too many see little more than the Village and Town Center shopping centers along the freeway – unaware of the town's rich and fascinating history.

Even many of those who live here know little about the fundamental changes over the 100 years since Corte Madera was formally incorporated as a town.

Most notably, what's changed over the past century is the actual geography itself. In 1916, much of what's now Corte Madera was marsh – including those shopping centers. The marsh stretched all the way to Pixley, near today's post office and fire station.

Corte Madera becomes a community, then a real town

Before 1894, there were only three homes in Corte Madera. But a newer and faster railroad brought in San Franciscans, eager to enjoy Corte Madera's balmy summertime weather, who set up tent cabins in the hills for weekend getaways and built summer homes along streets now known as Willow, Chapman, Eastman, Manzanita, Oakdale. Lots cost as little as $50.

But after the 1906 earthquake, many San Franciscans moved to Corte Madera permanently. In 1916, the citizens of Corte Madera voted 140 to 46 in favor of incorporation.

For the next 20 years or so, Corte Madera residents commuted by ferry to San Francisco, and there was little growth. But that would change in coming decades.

Marshlands drained, substantial post-war growth

Little cottages and cabins along the town's hillsides were eventually developed into more substantial homes. And other parts of town saw significant change as well.

The areas we now call Madera Gardens and Meadowsweet, once marsh, were drained and converted into pastures that the Meadowsweet Farm Dairy used to graze cattle.

In 1937, the dairy's owner sold 23 acres of that pasture to the town for $3,500 – a sum many citizens considered an extravagance. But that area, now Town Park, became one of Corte Madera's finest assets.

By the end of the World War II, there was intense pressure to allow postwar-style tract development to support a booming population, so those tidal sloughs and marshy pastures mostly disappeared.

In just a few years, developers filled the lowlands east of Pixley Avenue and the marshes between Ring Mountain and the Bay. Lands east of the highway were annexed by the town, and hundreds of homes were built in tracts named Marina Village, Marin Estates, Mariner Cove, Mariner Green, Mariner Highlands, and Vista del Bahia.

New commercial development kept pace with residential building. Between 1963 and 1967, Sanford Terrace, the Park Madera Shopping Center, several car dealerships on both sides of the freeway, and The Marketplace were all constructed.

Slower growth, and a contentious debate

With growing concern over growth and development, a majority of the Town Council was recalled from office in 1973 for its pro-growth stance. The focus shifted to the environment as a prime consideration in future development of the town's remaining hillsides, ridge-tops, and marshlands.

While other towns succumbed to pressures to allow high-density projects in those years, Corte Madera retained its stability through careful and courageous planning.

For example, Corte Madera was a County leader in acquiring open space during the 1970s – securing the pristine woodlands of Corte Madera Ridge, limiting development of Ring Mountain, and preserving remaining wetlands.

One of the last large parcels in Corte Madera was developed as The Village in the early 1980s after a decade of contentious debate. Citizens pressured developers to reduce the size of the project by two-thirds to fit more comfortably within the community. Today it is Marin's premier shopping mecca with more than 50 upscale stores.

That was followed by extensive renovation of both the Town Center and The Marketplace. In the 1990s, the original business district around Old Corte Madera Square was revitalized. In 2001, a handsome small shopping center and an assisted living complex replaced the aging Paradise Shopping Center.

Corte Madera's beautiful natural setting prevails

While other once splendid parts of the Bay Area suffered from excessive bulldozing, filling, and urbanization, the relatively unspoiled grandeur of Corte Madera's natural setting remains.

And although the freeway that bisects Corte Madera sometimes seems a detriment, the convenient access it provides has become an asset to the town.

Those humble bungalows built on lots that once sold for $50 now command up to $1 million or more – even after years of wear and tear. That's the price those who can afford it are willing to pay to enjoy Corte Madera's quality of life – in a town with a uniquely vibrant history.

CENTENNIAL EVENTS COMING UP IN APRIL

Corte Madera - The Way We Were

1905 view of Corté Madera train station and hotel, where Menke Park is now

Presentation of “The Way We Were” will be repeated on April 21 at the Corté Madera Community Center, 7pm.

The Centennial year began with an exhibit of vintage photos and Laurie Thompson’s narration of an illustrated history timeline on January 26 that drew an overflow crowd at the Library and meant that some people had to sit on the floor, while others were standing in the stacks. By popular demand, a bonus presentation is now scheduled for Thursday, April 21, at the larger Corté Madera Community Center, starting at 7:00 pm. It’s free, of course!

“Celebrating Corté Madera Marsh” - Sunday, April 24, with Roger Harris and Meryl Sundove, 11am to 1pm

April captures the height of the waterbird migration on the Pacific Flyway. The marsh walk starts with a visit to the important wetland at Marta’s Marsh, named after a former Town of Corté Madera town council member.

The walk goes to the edge of the San Francisco Bay along San Clemente Creek to watch waves of sandpipers and other waterbirds fly from the bay mudflats to the high tide refuge of the marsh. After the tide has risen further, the walk leads to a tidal channel to listen for and perhaps see the endangered Ridgway’s Rail, which is common in this marsh. Raptors and ducks can be expected, and even a river otter may show up. In addition to hearing about the remarkable history of this wetland and observing the behavior of wildlife, coastal ecology will also be addressed.

Total distance walked on level but potentially muddy levees will be about a mile. Heavy rain cancels. Bring your binoculars, if you have a pair, or a spotting scope.

Take Paradise Drive and turn onto Harbor Drive, then turn right onto Yolo, then turn left onto Channel Drive, going to where the road ends at the marsh.

CENTENNIAL EVENTS - AUGUST/SEPTEMBER

Fred Astaire Night on September 14

Many of us remember the great 1930's musical films with Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers. However, most of us would be surprised to learn that Fred's stage career began as early as 1905.

Fred, together with his sister, Adele Astaire, starred in a very successful vaudeville act through the 1920's.

Come at 6:30pm and enjoy a very special live show highlighting the career of Fred and Adele before sound came to film in 1930. Frederick Hodges, noted musical expert of this era, will play and sing many of the hit songs Fred and Adele actually performed.

You will see pictures of the theaters, posters and newspaper clips from then. It will be a very entertaining show, and a wonderful opening to the Ray Simpson Dance Band season that begins right after the Fred Astaire program ends. The Lions Club will be selling drinks before and after the program, and everyone is encouraged to stay and dance for the rest of the evening. It's all at the Community Center.

Old-Fashioned Ice Cream Social in Menke Park on September 25

Celebrate the pleasures of days gone by at the Centennial Ice Cream Social sponsored by the Corte Madera Women's Club on September 25 from 1 to 4 pm at historic Menke Park in Old Corte Madera Square. A special Lappert's ice cream is being created for the Centennial and served at this event, along with home-baked cookies, penny candy, popcorn, root beer, iced tea, and lemonade.

Enjoy live music by the "Raspberry Jam Band" at Piccolo Pavilion and admire the classy vintage cars on display.

There will be old-time games for kids on the lawn, including gunnysack races, beanbag toss, spoon relays, and a 'fish pond' -- with prizes for everyone.

Come early, come late, just be sure to come. Bring your friends, too. There's free admission for all.

Wear something that adds to the early 1900s theme, if you can. It's a great way to spend a Sunday afternoon!

Corte Madera Honors Its Elders

In recognition of their spirit, inspiration and endurance, the Corte Madera Town Council will celebrate all those town residents who are 90 or more years old at "Corte Madera Honors 2016" on Sunday afternoon, August 28 from 2:30 until 4:30 pm at the Corte Madera Community Center. As we commemorate Corte Madera's own 100th birthday, our nonagenarians and centenarians hold a special place of honor as a living connection to our past. Be sure to come tip your hat to our notable Corte Maderans!

Corte Madera is Reflected in Word, Song, and Photos

The spirit of Corte Madera is captured in a new town song and video on YouTube that can be accessed at https://youtu.be/Gy1_S7UQdps.

It's an exciting addition to our Centennial celebration now underway, in full flourish! Enjoy it and share it for years to come. It's great fun!

Thanks to those who put it together (you're in the credits!) Congratulations, Corte Madera! We have the best small town in Marin!

CENTENNIAL EVENTS - NOVEMBER & DECEMBER

Corte Madera Thanksgiving Day Turkey Trot starts at 8:00am in Town Park on November 24

This 5k Family-Friendly “run, walk, scoot, or bike” Thanksgiving Day Turkey Trot is for all ages. Starting time is 8:00am at Town Park, and the route will be announced at the site.

Everyone is invited, and it's free! This is a great way to get acquainted with other folks from all over town. Treats and beverages will be provided at the finish line.

Snow in Corte Madera? Really?

Watch for an announcement in the fall about a whole day of festivities at Menke Park on December 3 including snow, games, music, holiday lights, and food -- along with a special ceremony to bury the time capsule filled with documentation of Corte Madera's Centennial year. Save the date!

Snow in Corte Madera? You betcha! Three years before Corte Madera officially became a town, it snowed heavily on January 13, 1913. See the kids pulling a sled behind the train station so they could slide down the slope that's now where Piccolo Pavilion stands? Do you recognize the old hotel and the historic homes in the background that are still there today? Look for snow here again in 2016 and prepare to have tons of fun during Corte Madera's "Snow Day" at the end of our Centennial year.

SPONSORS, SUPPORTERS, AND VOLUNTEERS

Planning for Corte Madera's Centennial Celebration began two years ago, when the Corte Madera Community Foundation established an open committee of interested individuals, businesses, and organizations. Our mission? Create a vision for bringing the entire community together in celebration of our town's Centennial.

The year-long series of events and activities described in this calendar has been designed to engage people of all ages and interests. We're very pleased to have the Town of Corte Madera as a partner in turning that vision into a celebration everyone can enjoy.
